Executive Summary

Small business owners nationwide and in Ohio are doing all they can to strengthen their businesses and put the Great Recession's effects behind them. Now more than ever, it's critical they have the help of smart employment laws allowing them to attract and retain the best talent. Scientific opinion polling shows the vast majority of Ohio small business owners believe we're long overdue for federal and state policies protecting all workers from discrimination, regardless of sexual orientation or gender identity. It's good for business, it helps companies attract and retain talent and it's the right thing to do, according to our leading job creators.

A Ohio poll conducted April 8-17 for Small Business Majority by Greenberg Quinlan Rosner Research reveals 66% of the state's entrepreneurs believe federal law should prohibit employment discrimination against gay and transgender people. Furthermore, 70% of owners believe Ohio should have a state law prohibiting this type of discrimination.

In fact, the vast majority of small business owners already thought such laws existed. A whopping 84% of entrepreneurs didn't realize it's currently legal under federal law to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay, lesbian or transgender. A mere 5% knew it is legal. In terms of state law, 79% of entrepreneurs were unaware it is legal in Ohio to refuse to hire someone based on sexual orientation or gender identity. Small employers also strongly believe that an employer should not be able to fire or refuse to hire someone who is gay, lesbian or transgender based on their (the employer's) religious beliefs. More than half of small employers in the Buckeye State agree this should not be permitted to occur, whether or not working with a gay or transgender employee conflicts with an employer's religious beliefs.

The majority of Ohio small business owners oppose the current federal law allowing employers to deny married same-sex couples the family benefits they offer to heterosexual couples, and another two-thirds oppose employees with a same-sex partner or spouse being taxed for their dependent's health benefits while employees who have heterosexual partners or spouses aren't. Sixty-three percent oppose the federal law prohibiting lesbian and gay workers' spouses from being provided with the Social Security benefits that are extended to heterosexual spouses, even though gay and lesbian employees, as well as their employers, contribute to the Social Security system. Seven in 10 Ohio small business owners say businesses are hurt by the federal law—known as the Defense of Marriage Act—that requires them to treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes. More than half also oppose laws prohibiting gay or lesbian people from sponsoring their partners for immigration purposes.

Considering the widespread small business support for protecting gay and transgender people from employment discrimination, it makes sense that 57% of small business owners believe laws that protect against discrimination can improve their bottom line. Entrepreneurs agree these kinds of laws help employers attract the best and brightest employees, regardless of whether an employee is gay or transgender. Additionally, entrepreneurs strongly believe implementing a nondiscrimination policy is the right thing to do. Of employers who have a nondiscrimination policy, 83% say it's because they believe all employees should be treated fairly and equally, and 70% say they have it because it's the right thing to do.

Many Ohio small businesses already have their own formal or informal policies protecting gay and transgender workers from employment discrimination. Forty percent of survey respondents have such a policy already. Among the reasons employers with nondiscrimination policies have them, nearly half say their policy improves their ability to attract and retain talented employees. Of employers who offer family benefits, nearly 6 in 10 either already offer benefits to same-sex spouses and partners of their employees, or would do so if they had a gay or lesbian employee.

It's also important to note Ohio small business owners see little to no cost associated with having this kind of policy in place. Of those who have adopted their own nondiscrimination policy to protect gay and transgender workers from discrimination, 75% report the policy cost them “nothing or next to nothing.”

There are a number of federal laws that provide different types of protections for employees. Poll results revealed that entrepreneurs strongly believe gay, lesbian and transgender employees should be afforded those same employment protections.

With regard to political affiliation, 49% of small business owners identified as Republican, 23% as Democrat and 18% as independent.

Main Findings

- Vast majority of Ohio business owners favor federal and state laws protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination in employment:

The majority of entrepreneurs (66%) believe federal law should prohibit employment discrimination against gay and transgender people. Seventy percent also agree Ohio should have a law prohibiting this type of discrimination.

- The vast majority of small business owners didn't know it is legal under federal and/or state law to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay or lesbian:

When asked if, to the best of their knowledge, it is legal or illegal under federal law to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay or transgender, a striking 84% of small business owners said it is illegal. Merely 5% knew it is legal. In terms of state law, 79% of entrepreneurs were unaware that it is legal in Ohio to refuse to hire someone based on sexual orientation or gender identity.

- More than half of respondents believe an employer should not be able to fire or refuse to hire someone who is gay or transgender based on their (the employer's) religious beliefs:

A 54% majority believes an employer should not be able to fire or refuse to hire someone who is gay or transgender if working with a gay or transgender employee conflicts with their (the employer's) religious beliefs. What's more, 70% believe a business should not be legally allowed to refuse services to some customers but not others based on religious beliefs.

- Nearly six in 10 entrepreneurs agree laws protecting employees from discrimination help boost bottom lines because they enable employers to attract the best and the brightest:

Fifty-seven percent of small business owners believe laws that protect against discrimination improve the business's bottom line by attracting the best and brightest employees, regardless of whether an employee is gay or transgender.

- Many businesses have their own policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination; nearly the same number say having the policy helps them attract talent:

Forty percent of small businesses surveyed have a policy protecting gay and transgender employees. Among the reasons employers with nondiscrimination policies have them, 47% say their policy improves their ability to attract and retain talented employees. Additionally, entrepreneurs strongly believe implementing a nondiscrimination policy is the right thing to do. Of employers who have a nondiscrimination policy, 83% say it's because they believe all employees should be treated fairly and equally, and 70% say they have it because it's the right thing to do.

- Nearly six in 10 employers that offer family benefits already provide or would provide family health benefits to same-sex partners and spouses of their employees:

Forty percent of owners offer family benefits. Nearly one in 10 of these employers already provide benefits to same-sex partners or spouses of their employees, and an additional 49% say they would do so if they had a gay or lesbian employee.

- Policies protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination have nearly no business cost associated with them, according to the vast majority of owners that have a policy:

A strong 75% of small business owners who have adopted their own nondiscrimination policy to protect gay and transgender people from discrimination report the policy has a cost of "nothing or next to nothing." Merely 2% say it had a small but significant cost, and none say it had a substantial cost.

- The majority of respondents oppose the current federal law allowing employers to deny married same-sex couples the benefits they offer to heterosexual couples; two-thirds oppose same-sex couples being taxed for family benefits while heterosexual couples aren't:

Fifty-four percent of small employers oppose the current federal law permitting employers to offer family benefits to married heterosexual couples while denying those benefits to married same-sex couples. Sixty-six percent oppose the fact that if a small business elects to provide benefits to a same-sex couple, the employee must pay income taxes on their spouse's/partner's benefits and the employer must pay the additional payroll taxes—while businesses and their employees do not have to pay such taxes for health benefits provided for heterosexual employees' spouses.

- Almost two-thirds of Ohio owners oppose the federal law prohibiting lesbian and gay workers' spouses from being provided with the Social Security benefits that are extended to heterosexual spouses:

Under federal law, lesbian and gay workers, as well as their employers, contribute to the Social Security system, but these workers' spouses are not provided with the Social Security benefits extended to heterosexual spouses. Sixty-three percent of entrepreneurs oppose this law.

- More than half of respondents believe the federal Family and Medical Leave Act should provide unpaid leave for gay and lesbian employees, like it does for heterosexual workers:

Currently, businesses covered under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act are required to provide unpaid leave when a heterosexual employee needs to care for a sick or injured spouse, but not when a gay or lesbian employee needs to care for a sick or injured spouse or partner. A 54% majority of entrepreneurs believe this law should be adjusted to include gay and lesbian employees.

- Seven in 10 employers say businesses are hurt by the federal law requiring them to treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes, and by laws prohibiting gay and lesbian people from sponsoring their partners for immigration purposes:

The federal Defense of Marriage Act requires employers to treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes. Seventy percent of those surveyed agree that this law hurts businesses by requiring them to treat their employees differently and to administer two systems of benefits. Furthermore, 53% believe immigration laws prohibiting gay or lesbian people from sponsoring their partners can hurt businesses—particularly those competing internationally.

- Respondents were politically diverse:

Forty-nine percent of respondents identified themselves as Republican or independent-leaning Republican, 23% as Democrat or independent-leaning Democrat and 18% as independent.

Vast Majority of Entrepreneurs Support Protecting Gay, Transgender People from Employment Discrimination

Scientific opinion polling reveals small business owners of all industries and political affiliations believe gay and transgender individuals should have equal workplace discrimination protections.

Sixty-six percent of entrepreneurs believe federal law should prohibit employment discrimination against gay and transgender people. Seventy percent of owners in Ohio also believe their state should have a law prohibiting this type of discrimination.

Figure 1: Strong majority of owners believe federal law and Ohio law should prohibit employment discrimination against gay and transgender people

As you may know, federal law prohibits discrimination on the basis of gender, sex, age, race, and color. However, federal law does NOT protect gay and transgender people from discrimination in employment. Would you favor or oppose such a federal law?

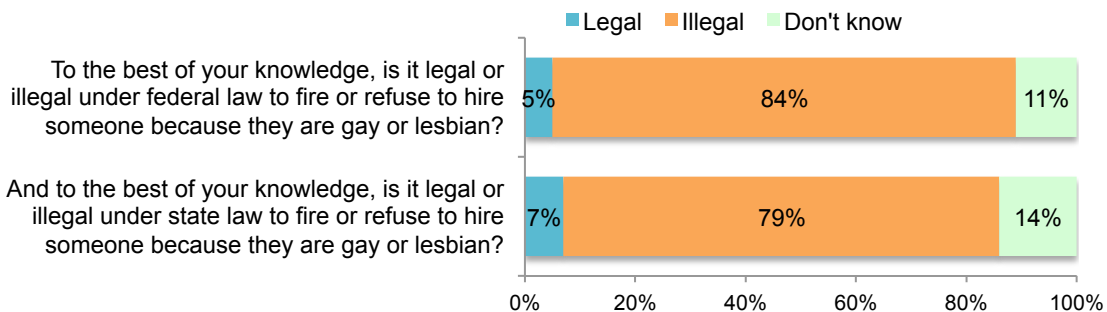

In addition state law does NOT protect gay and transgender people from discrimination in employment. Would you favor or oppose such a federal law?

We also asked small business owners if it is legal or illegal, to the best of their knowledge, to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay or lesbian under federal law. A striking 84% of small business owners incorrectly believed it is illegal, while merely 5% correctly believed it is legal. In terms of state law, 79% of entrepreneurs were unaware that it is legal in Ohio to refuse to hire someone based on sexual preference or gender identity.

Figure 2: Vast majority of small employers didn't know it is legal to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay or lesbian

To the best of your knowledge, is it legal or illegal under state or federal law to fire or refuse to hire someone because they are gay or lesbian?

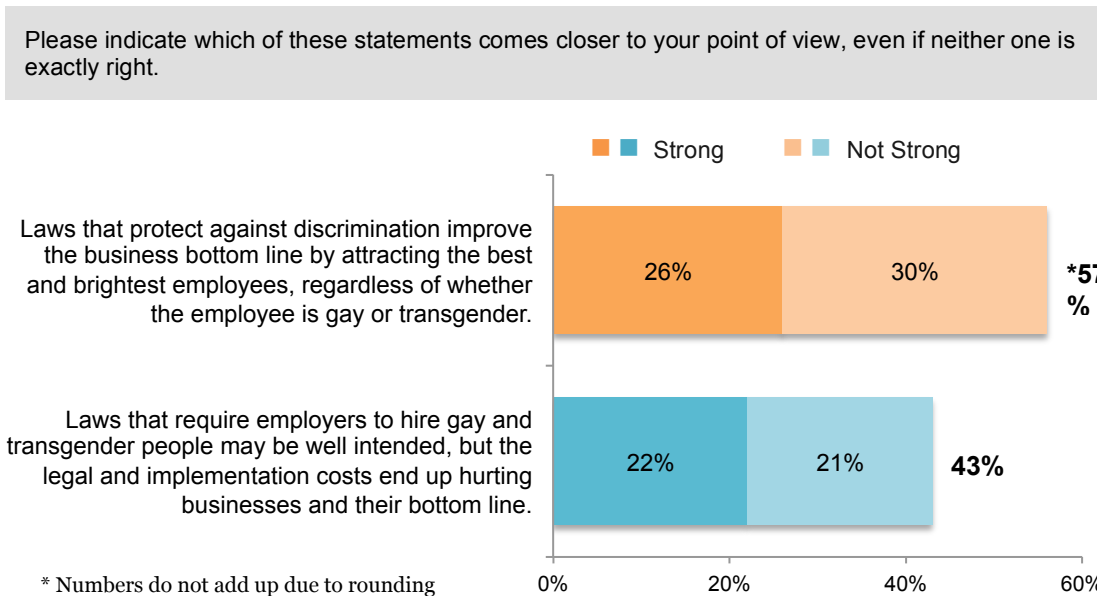

A 54% majority believes an employer should not be able to fire or refuse to hire someone who is gay or transgender, regardless of whether working with a gay or transgender employee conflicts with their (the employer's) religious beliefs. What's more, 70% believe a business should not be legally allowed to refuse services to some customers but not others based on religious beliefs.

Figure 3: Majority agrees an employer shouldn't be able to fire or refuse to hire someone who is gay or transgender, based on their religious beliefs

A strong majority of entrepreneurs (57%) agree laws protecting employees from discrimination help boost bottom lines because they enable employers to attract the best and the brightest workers.

Many Entrepreneurs Have a Nondiscrimination Policy and Agree it Benefits Business, Costs Next to Nothing

Four in 10 businesses have their own policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination. Among the reasons employers with nondiscrimination policies have them, 47% report the policy improves their ability to attract and retain talented employees. This is the third most cited reason, next to entrepreneurs' belief that all employees should be treated fairly and equally (83%), and that having this kind of policy is the right thing to do (70%).

Which of the following best describes the reasons your company adopted a policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination in hiring and promotion? You may mark as many responses as you want.

Overall, 40% of owners offer family benefits. Of that group, 57% say they either provide or would provide family health benefits to same-sex partners and same-sex spouses of their employees: 8% already provide benefits to same-sex partners and spouses of their employees, and an additional 49% say they would do so if they had a gay or lesbian employee. The 43% minority says they would not.

According to the vast majority of owners who have policies protecting gay and transgender employees from discrimination, these policies have a business cost that is nothing or next to nothing.

Of business owners who do not have a formal policy, 36% estimated the cost of creating a policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination to be nothing or next to nothing. Twenty-nine percent estimated a small but insignificant cost. Twenty-one percent estimated a small but significant cost, and 12% estimated a substantial cost.

However, according to business owners who actually have a policy, the cost of creating the policy is nearly non-existent. A strong 75% of small business owners that have adopted their own nondiscrimination policy to protect gay and transgender people from discrimination report the policy has a cost of nothing or next to nothing. Twenty-three percent report it being a small, insignificant cost and only 2% say it's a small, but significant cost. None report it being a substantial cost.

■ Figure 6: Nearly four in 10 owners estimate that a nondiscrimination policy costs little to nothing; three-quarters who have them report that to be true

Which of the following best describes how much you estimate it would cost your business to create a policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination? (Asked of those who don't have a policy)

Thinking back, which of the following best describes how much it cost your business to adopt a non-discrimination policy protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination? (Asked of those with policy)

Majorities Say Various Federal Benefits for Heterosexual Employees Should Also Apply to Gay and Lesbian Employees

There are a number of federal laws that provide different types of protections for employees. Poll results revealed that entrepreneurs strongly believe gay, lesbian and transgender employees should be afforded the same employment protections.

Specifically, 54% of small employers oppose the current federal law permitting employers to offer family benefits to married heterosexual couples while denying those benefits to married same-sex couples. And, 66% oppose the federal law requiring that when a small business elects to provide benefits to a same-sex couple, the employee must pay income taxes on their spouse's/partner's benefits and the employer must pay the additional payroll taxes—while businesses and their employees do not have to pay such taxes for health benefits provided for heterosexual employees' spouses.

■ Figure 7: Two-thirds of owners believe same-sex couples and their employers should not have to pay extra taxes for family benefits

Do you favor or oppose this different taxation of health benefits for same-sex couples?

In addition, under current federal law, lesbian and gay workers, as well as their employers, contribute to the Social Security system—but these workers' spouses are not provided with the Social Security benefits extended to heterosexual workers' spouses. Sixty-three percent of entrepreneurs oppose this law.

Figure 8: Nearly two-thirds of owners oppose gay and transgender employees' spouses not being extended the Social Security benefits extended to heterosexual workers' spouses

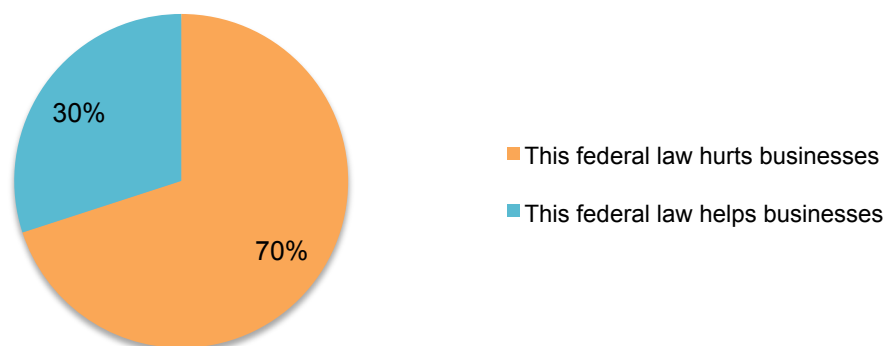

Furthermore, businesses covered under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act are required to provide unpaid leave when a heterosexual employee needs to care for a sick or injured spouse, but not when a gay or lesbian employee needs to care for a sick or injured spouse or partner. A 54% majority of entrepreneurs favor adjusting this law to include gay and lesbian employees.

Federal law also requires employers to treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes. Seventy percent of those surveyed agree this hurts businesses by requiring them to treat their employees differently and to administer two systems of benefits. On the other hand, only 30% agree this law helps businesses by allowing them to offer benefits to heterosexual couples but avoid offering benefits to same-sex couples.

Figure 9: Owners agree current federal law hurts employers by making them treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes

Currently, federal law requires employers to treat married same-sex couples as unmarried for benefit and payroll purposes. Some businesses have argued that this law hurts businesses by requiring them to treat their employees differently and to administer two systems of benefits and payroll—one for heterosexual couples and another for same-sex couples. Other businesses have argued this law helps businesses by allowing them to offer benefits to heterosexual couples but avoid offering benefits to same-sex couples. Which comes closer to your opinion?

Turning to another topic, current law prohibits gay or lesbian people from sponsoring their partners for the purpose of immigration. Fifty-three percent agree this can hurt businesses—particularly those that compete internationally—by making it harder to attract and retain workers, and therefore oppose the law prohibiting gay or lesbian people from sponsoring their partners for the purpose of immigration.

Conclusion

Small business owners' views clearly underscore the need to for improved employment laws that protect all American workers from discrimination, regardless of sexual orientation and gender identity. Entrepreneurs in Ohio resoundingly favor federal and state laws protecting gay and transgender people from discrimination in employment. In fact, the vast majority was under the impression that such laws already existed. This shows our employment laws are lagging much too far behind common perceptions and expectations people have about employment.

Many small businesses voluntarily provide protections to gay, lesbian and transgender employees and report positive outcomes of implementing these policies. This shows why they want these laws officially on the books. Protecting all employees from workplace discrimination, regardless of sexual orientation and gender identity, helps small business owners attract and retain the best talent—and it costs virtually nothing. Entrepreneurs' opinions make it evident: it's time for our employment laws to reflect the modern day workplace and the views of the people who shape it.

Methodology

This poll reflects a national Internet survey of 508 small business owners with oversamples of 100 respondents each in Ohio, Missouri, Michigan, North Carolina and Pennsylvania, creating a combined data set of 1,008 small business owners. This report reflects the data from a combined database where the state oversamples were weighted down to reflect their proportion of the target population. The sample was drawn from Research Now and conducted by Greenberg Quinlan Rosner Research for Small Business Majority. The survey was conducted from April 8-17, 2013. The overall margin of error is +/- 3.1%. The margin of error for state-level data is +/- 9.8%.
